THE PERSON OF TH HOW BOTTS MADE TREASON ODIOUS .-The con-in-jay cry of the faratical Union men of "ha day is, that "treason must be made odious." This is the key-note from Join Minor Botts down to the very insignificant fire flies that fletter around his canale. And how, reader, do you think Botis has been engaged in making treeses colous? Hear him at Alexandria on Trace; "I shad cone more gratuitous work in procuring pardons for rebels than any other an in the State! What a confession! The Losi setire man, and that too without being paid for i, in getting the pardons of men who beserved hemp! After having labored so hard for nothing-not oven a U. S. Senatorship being plered, -Botts is determined to undo, as less us he can, the gratuitous work. But if casession is treason, and treason a crime, is not Mr. Botts a very salpable man to have labored stock. to hard, without compensation, to make the orgents of that treson respectable, by gotting ordens for them? - Fred. Herald.

The recent developments connected with the acministration of the freedmen's bureau in vagiors sections of the country, have opened the gree of many of those who have heretofore been Mendly to that institution, simply because they were hostile to the white people of the South. They thought it a very necessary institution for the care and protection of the negro, but they now find that it is used and abused for the opecial benefit of certain characters "who are running the machine" at the expense of both the poor freedmen and the government which they are professing to serve!

The Petersburg Empress says that a man left here Monday on a trip to the North, for the sole purpose of seeing "tilting hoops" and the "lalse calf, those articles not having yet appeared in Petersburg.
